FACULTY MEMBERS TAKE TRIPS DURING SPRING HOLIDAYS

Most of the faculty members of the college enjoyed their Spring holidays to the fullest extent by taking short trips to neighboring localities.

Miss Fortson, who traveled the greatest distance went to Florida. When interviewed about her trip, she stated that while the Florida water was beautifully blue, she preferred to live in Georgia with the muddy rivers.

Miss Fortson

MISS FORTSON

Miss Margaret Fortson, instructor in English, is a native of Athens, Georgia. She attended the University of Georgia, and University of Delaware.

REV. CARPENTER WILL SPEAK

The next speaker in a series of addresses planned by the college administration will be the Reverend C. C. J. Carpenter, a well-known Episcopal minister in this city.

CATALOGUE WILL APPEAR IN APRIL

Will Contain Complete Information Concerning School

It has been announced that the catalogue of the college for next year will appear probably in the latter part of April. It will be much larger than the catalogue of last year and will be bound in book form. Various sections of the building and students will be included in addition to other information. Complete discussion of all courses, names, and qualifications of teaching personnel, and the rules and regulations governing entrance and graduation will be given.

Publication has been delayed by the necessity to include information concerning the newly formed School of Commerce and Finance. Work on the catalogue has been led to a large extent by Dean Askew.

BIO-WEEKLY PRACTICES HELD BY GLEE CLUB

The Glee Club has recently increased its practice to two re-echonals in the morning, with a change of the occasion seque and the show that is to be presented on the 15th.

Cameron Back of New York is the Commercial Building of the Savan- nah High School, and on January 10th Mr. Back is training director of the New York Stock Exchange Institute. There is much experience with young people. His talk, delivered in a somewhat amus- ing and expressive style, contained much useful advice and was enjoyed by all present.

Several members of the College Commission and others interested in education were present.

Observant Student Notices

BY HINKLEY MURPHY

Out! Don't tell anybody, but I have heard sincerely that they are going to build a building next door to the auditorium. It is going to be called the auditorium, from Lat. Aedificio, to build, and oratorio, a speech.

I had a look at the blueprints the other day and they are pretty complicated, all lines, and small drawing to details, and the plumbing plans would keep you over they are so complex-looking. I think we're just fooling trying to figure out what each thing was. It makes me wonder if they really need blueprints, or if just go ahead and build and they think it is all right. I'm not sure if you might just have those blueprints to kid the public? I'm not sure but they have随 advertisements and in the on the second floor, and O yes, the foundations. Don't you think the bricklayers are kind of tired of them upended?

Bricklayer: I am tired of laying bricks, bricks, bricks. I wanna work on the roof where I can see the people.

Architect: But, Mr. Somon, the roof is not ready yet. How could you work on the roof?

Bricklayer: Flaring up, no. but yes. If you work on the roof, I'm going home, and you can see the bricks your own self.

Architect (Sighs): Now we go to the roof; and you, Mr. Laborer: I want a new wheelbarrow painted red, and a new hat, Architect: (hastily) Well, boys, we will adjourn now, just as you're best and don't be too temperamental; remember, a house is built, not torn down. You don't forget that the front end goes on Gaston Street.

Weker: Can't we have a roof garden?

Architect: "Bah!"

While all this is going on, because you must see, actually (come on, it isn't so hard if you once try) you must see mentally the windows of Mrs. Miller's house. They are very happy with their simple awning at the side of the house, and very very happy and they gaze with deep admiration at the fear of the steel workers who climb high on the newewrized girders; they make rash calculations of the number of bricks used, etc.

We have unreliable reports that a course in window-gazing may be given with a degree of Bachelor of Conservation, and the Master of the in the same subject with extra emphasis on the dangers of a turned fascination. There will be no instructor, since the students will be instructed by the window anyhow. All you need is good eyes and strong greets.

This issue is dedicated to Miss Margaret Fortson, professor of English and Commerce.

It seems as though the 8 o'clock Social Science class has changed the habits of numerous of our students. The hour also decided many students against Social Science II this quarter.

We are in favor of a movement to organize a Bureau for Finding Alibis for Those Who Thought They Were Going to Make the Dean's List and Then Didn't.

Tah, tsh! When will some of our students grow up.

Cooperation (?) In Clubs

It seems that some students haven't heard of the saying "Never start anything that you can't finish." This saying could well be realized and reckoned with here at Armstrong. At the beginning of the school year various organizations were begun with surprising success in regard to organization and membership. The Glee Club had about forty-five members. The Dramatic Club had about thirty members. The Debating Club Trophies. The staff of "The Inkwell" included about twenty-five members. In fact every club in the school was doing fine. But now, what has happened? Miss Spencer has to hunt around to see if she can't get twenty people to come to Glee Club so they can practice. The attendance at the Dramatic Club meetings dropped off, so badly that Miss Fortson decided that the best thing to do would be to abolish the club until next year. The Debating Society is in the process of falling with the ten members. "The Inkwell" is now being published through the efforts of about ten students. Even the Student Council, the whole student body's representative, does not get the support of the students. This is a deplorable situation that exists at Armstrong and is one that should be corrected immediately. This was the first of the last quarter of the first year of this school. It would be a disgrace to the school to have all of its organizations fall in their first year. It would be a disgrace to the students of the school. The only way this situation can be cleared up is by having the students take an interest in the affairs of the school. If this should happen, there is no reason why this school can not have a large number of flourishing organizations. So students, let's make this last quarter of this inaugural year one of enjoyment and success.

"Gamble Hall"

"The Inkwell" would like to go on record as favoring the naming of the new auditorium of the college in honor of Mayor Thomas Gamble. "Gamble Hall" or "Gamble Auditorium," as the name for the new auditorium would perpetuate the memory of the man who was so instrumental in founding the college, and remind future students many years from now that it was largely through his efforts that the college they attend was conceived and founded.

Up to the present time, the only material honor that Mayor Gamble has received for his efforts has been the Lucus Award, which is yearly presented to the citizen who does the most for Savannah. He highly deserves this award, but it is insufficient to hand down his name to the future students and citizens. Naming a new auditorium in honor of him would be a step toward repaying him for his efforts, and would express in some measure the thanks that Savannah owes him for his college.

Do You Know How?

If all the editors ever written about study habits were laid end to end, the majority of people would find their way to them. However, we, as school publications, would like to bring to your attention the fact that there is a scientific way to study which in most cases will bring a much more reliable result than merely staring at a book or idly twiddling a pencil. Some would-be students attempt to study in a careless, hit-or-miss way, or discovered the logical way to go about it. We leave it up to you to decide which is the better.

The following suggestions have not been unearthed by us, and we present them to you for what they are worth.

Study every day in the same place and at the same time.

"About studying seriously. Don't lounge at it. Try to do the work without seeking assistance.

Do reading work first and written work later.

Use all books, etc. to the best advantage, using appendices, notes, vocabulary, etc. Understand a passage before memorizing it.

Careful Please

In this modern age of our people seem to be crammed with everything. Everything one does in these times is done in the quickest way possible. People hurry to and from the office at breakneck speed just to save a few minutes time. Some people drive at terrific speeds just to get a thrill. People drive recklessly in heavy traffic just to scare the other person. No wonder we are so quick to think that every second counts. Thousands upon thousands of drivers, occupants of cars, and pedestrians are killed or seriously injured in the United States alone each year. Careful driving has become an absolute necessity because careless driving does not just affect those involved.

Most of the college students of the United States drive an automobile and the students of Armstrong Junior College are in any way like the normal students, they have a mania for speed. The Inkwell believes that if we are to have a safe automobile system, the students must be taught to drive carefully and fully backing any movement for better and safer driving.

Our apologies to Howard Paddison whose was inadvertently omitted from the Dean's List in the last issue of the paper.

Faculty and Student Opinion

This month should we adopt the honor system?

Miss Fortson thinks that theoretically the honor system is a good idea, and that when the enthusiasm of the students is worked up and their cooperation obtained, it is the most effective method. She says that the honor system should not only apply to examinations but also to the building without having them disturbed. "It is not the function of the professor to be a policeman, but satisfactory for everybody concerned if responsibility is centered in the students." While we have no trouble in the present system, the school grows problems will arise, and as the honor system is built up on tradition, Miss Fortson thinks that she should be seriously thinking about it.

Helene Herndon thinks that the honor system would make us more like the college students and develop a better school spirit. She believes that we should be open to start the system in order to improve it.

Arthur Jeffords feels that the honor system would cause dissension in the student body because there are some students with whom they see cheating, and there is always a few who will cheat. He believes that the system allows students to continue cheating, and it is the natural reaction for some to take advantage of this opportunity. These people, he says, would continue the habit in later life, possibly causing themselves disasters.

If we were asked (we have not been asked) to discuss an interesting phase of modern literature, we probably would talk of the Van Doren Method of American Literature. There is no one else in the world with whom we are so familiar. The Van Doren Method of American Literature, as a result of their work, has had a great influence on the world, and has been a great influence on the world, and has

The Van Doren's have high regard for each other, and the one never seems to get in the other's way. They believe that the line of demarcation between their respective works is a fine one. In our opinion, the Van Doren's are far too modest about their work. They have done much to promote reading in America. It works on a novel and a moderate scheme of things, but in the direction of its author, who serves as president.

Louis Untermyer, poet and author (and one of the great readers of poetry), once revealed in an autobiographical sketch that he was greatly impressed by Paul's writing. He said, "I am a student at the University of Columbia. Music will be furnished by the Rambles.

Rostand, the author of that delightful comedy, Cyrano de Bergerac, was called upon during the first night of its performance to quiet the crowd which was roaring so loudly that the play could not continue. Then after the play had been finished, the crowd called for an encore, and Rostand, strong and enough, quickly drove out to the university with his wife until his hot success had cooled.

Those who are harem-seekers, adventure will delight in Negri's novel, The Rose of the Englishwoman, the story of a newspaper man's wife, a journalist, Max Miller (who wrote I Cover the Waterfront) Farnsworth's novel, and his delightful, entertaining fashion.

It is true that an author looks upon his published works as do parents upon their children, but it is supposed to have said (if we are the member the exact words), "I have a favorite child in this world, and his name is David Copperfield."

A Book Review

By HANKY MURPHY

The young recruits of course knew none of these things. They got killed because they were not trained, they were not equipped, they were not lucky, they were not armed. All they knew was that they were fighting a war, and that was the war they were fighting.

The war was fought in Italy, in France, in Africa, in Russia, in China. The war was fought in the air, on land, on sea. The war was fought in the trenches, in the woods, in the fields, in the cities.

The war was fought by men, by women, by children. The war was fought by the rich, by the poor, by the beautiful, by the ugly.

The war was fought by the strong, by the weak, by the brave, by the cowardly.

FENCING TEAM TO ARRANGE MATCHES

FRESHMAN RULES

As we all know, through this year there has been no need for specific rules governing conduct of underclassmen—but the time has come when we shall start formulating rules for the freshman class of the coming year so that they will not be tempted to disregarded the upperclassmen. This would not be hard for them to do, as more than likely their class will be larger than that of the upperclassmen. Therefore we are going to lay down a definite set of rules which the freshmen should follow and in the event that they should disregard these rules, any form of punishment should be put into effect just to remind them that they can not walk over their upperclassmen. If they ever get into any such act, these would not be stopping them, and it is for that reason that we shall install a set of rules regulating their conduct, and we should be very strict with them if they do not observe these rules. All colleges have very definite rules for freshmen to follow and we should likewise follow our steps in the footsteps of more experienced colleges by forming a set of rules that tradition will uphold. The first rule might be that freshmen should not be allowed to sit or stand at cocktail parties or other social events. Freshmen might be instructed to enter the building by the rear doors and depart by the same. In conformity with the traditions of all major colleges, our freshmen should have their hair cut short during their first quarter of the year. Freshmen might be compelled to do what an upperclassman asks, if the request be reasonable. Freshmen should use the back stairway in going to and from classes. There are many suggested rules that could be inaugurated and many suggestions will be made by the freshmen and consequently more interesting to the average spectator.

The matches with the College of Charleston and Savannah High School are being planned, and other schools may be added to the list.

Just before the Spring holidays, a tournament was held and the winners were to be given at least two honorary plaques to the winning team. The team chosen is entirely temporary and will probably change from the first match. It consists of Henry, Pedddle, Ross, McQueen, Simpson and Johnson.

The team is practiced both in English and Italian styles of fighting, and will probably be prepared to fight either in competition. The French section places the emphasis on form, while the Italian allows more freedom, and consequently more interesting to the average spectator.

The matches that the team is planning will probably be held in the near future.

BUILDING A BUILDING IN BACKYARD

Pit!" and, "When are our marks coming home?"

Serious though, it does make one (2, 3) feel elated to see a fine, useful building going up. It is a step forward, and do you know, there will march through its doors good students, and if its ideals are real, there will be fine citizens of Savannah coming out. Look ahead, and you will see the students becoming acquainted with the beautiful "Know Thyself."

There will be many features in this building which were unknown in other schools. The building will be one of the most progressive thought of progress, ambition. By the way, mention recalls the latent wish for "Peeers Ware is guilty of; "Which of the more ambitious, the farmer who plants corn, or the one who plants lettuce?"" or "Tell us, when you wish to get ahead?" is not the best, is not the best, is not the best.

It also seems as though we could form a track team here this year. We have several potential track stars, and we might be able, with the finest team, to get together a good while team. It's worth the try, anyhow.

We are studying Architecture; there are enough stresses and strains in French, Biology, and Social Science to do for us, and think of the danger of reading blue-print backwards!
